1. Medscape has launched a free AI medical scribe for US physicians, the latest entry in a developing space of artificial intelligence tools to help with clinical tasks. Known as Medscape Scribe, the new tool — available to all US doctors when logged in to their Medscape account — transcribes conversations during patient visits and generates a synopsis of the encounter. Clinicians can select from three commonly used summarization templates, depending on their preference or the type of visit:
  - a. SOAP (Subjective, Objective, Assessment, Plan)
  - b. H&P (History & Physical)
  - c. POMR (Problem-Oriented Medical Record)

The tool can be used in the Medscape app to record consultations and on medscape.com to edit the reports and integrate them into the electronic health record. Scribe is compliant with the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA). Transcripts and summaries are removed after 72 hours. About a half dozen tools to help doctors perform similar tasks have been developed by other companies.

9. Mike Rowe interviews CareerTech State Director Brent Haken

A chance meeting between Oklahoma CareerTech State Director Brent Haken and Mike Rowe, Emmy award-winning television host and bestselling author, resulted in an episode of Rowe's podcast, "The Way I Heard It." Rowe, a leading advocate for the skilled trades, released the episode last week. He was in Oklahoma to film materials for Oklahoma's energy industry when he met Haken at Central Technology Center. Their conversation -- along with busloads of high school students arriving at Central Tech for classes -- led Rowe to invite Haken to talk on the podcast.

A few of their sessions cost, but these are FREE: How to build Your Wilderness First Aid Kit, Desert Hazards Survival: Myth vs. Reality, What Search & Rescue Needs You to Know
12. A recent StateImpact Oklahoma story about recruiting long-term care certified nursing aides highlighted Tulsa Technology Center's nursing transitions program for high school seniors.
The program allows the students to get CNA training and then transition into nursing classes. When students graduate from the program, they can apply for the licensed practical nursing bridge program, through which they can become LPNs in six months, according to the article.
Read more on the KOSU website. Tulsa Tech isn't the only Oklahoma technology center with such a program. Find the technology center in your area on the Oklahoma CareerTech website.
