Paraprofessionals play a vital role that is both similar to and different from that of a supervising teacher. The paraprofessional’s role is defined by a job description, as well as by the working relationship between the paraprofessional and the teacher. Ethical responses to specific situations are a requirement of both teachers and paraprofessionals.

Objectives

By the end of this module, the paraprofessional will be able to:

1. Compare the roles of paraprofessionals and supervising teachers.
2. Identify other responsibilities of paraprofessionals.
3. Describe a “week one action plan” for paraprofessionals.
4. List strategies for career success.
5. Interview a paraprofessional.
6. Write your ideal job description.
7. Respond to ethical issues for paraprofessionals.
Roles of Teachers and Paraprofessionals

The role of the paraprofessional is defined in part by a job description. Paraprofessionals perform specific duties, tasks, and other responsibilities defined in their job description. The job description may also identify the physical locations where these responsibilities will be performed, such as the name of the school, school building, and specific classrooms. It may also describe any unique qualifications required for the job, such as the ability to lift a specific weight level or any additional training needed. The job description may identify the supervisor(s) of the paraprofessional.

School districts usually maintain written job descriptions for every job in the district. The format of the job description varies with each district.

In addition to the job description, the role of the paraprofessional is also defined by the working relationship between the paraprofessional and the supervising teacher. Paraprofessionals work under the direction and guidance of a supervising teacher. The teacher also monitors and evaluates the performance of the paraprofessional and provides feedback to improve performance. The ideal relationship between the teacher and the paraprofessional may be described as a team of dedicated professionals collaborating to serve the needs of each student. Although the job description may not say so directly, a key requirement for success as a paraprofessional is to keep in motion. For example, students’ lunch time is not a time for the paraprofessional to visit with other staff. Instead, it should be a time to support students’ social skills. It is impossible to adequately assist the teacher and effectively meet the needs of individual students while remaining seated for long periods. The importance of the paraprofessional remaining visible and in motion is evident in the list of responsibilities below.

Teacher and paraprofessional roles are different, but some responsibilities may be shared. The chart below lists some common responsibilities of a supervising teacher and a paraprofessional. Although the supervising teacher frequently assigns specific tasks to the paraprofessional, within the boundaries of the job description, both may perform the paraprofessional’s tasks as needed. Sharing of the paraprofessional’s responsibilities may reflect the paraprofessional’s level of training and experience, the specific skills needed, the requirements of individual instructional activities, as well as the type of classroom or instructional setting itself. The personalities of the teacher and the paraprofessional may also play a role, as well as the teacher’s preferences. Every school and situation is different, so it is important for the paraprofessional to communicate with the supervising teacher and ask questions as they arise.
The paraprofessional frequently works with and assists students in a wide variety of settings, including the classroom, lab facilities, off-campus or community-based settings, hallways, on playgrounds, and in transportation situations. In some of these settings, the supervising teacher may not always be present. However, the paraprofessional’s role does not replace the role of the teacher; the school will designate certified personnel to whom the paraprofessional can report.

Other Paraprofessional Responsibilities

In addition to responsibilities relating to instruction, paraprofessionals often have many non-instructional duties relating to their assigned students. It is important to communicate with the supervising teacher about these duties, including any policies and rules that may apply and the teacher’s expectations of your performance.

• Accompanying students between classrooms and other facilities
• Assisting students during off-school and community-based activities
• Assisting students with transportation-related needs, such as:
  • waiting with students
  • making sure students board the right bus
  • helping the bus driver with a student’s adaptive equipment
• Assisting in transferring or moving students
• Assisting individual students with self-care needs (such as positioning, feeding, toileting)
• Assisting individual students with health-related and physical therapy needs
• Taking students to and from the lunch room, having lunch with the students, and assisting with lunch line supervision
• Supervising students during recess periods and while on field trips
• Taking attendance, maintaining records, and similar tasks
• Maintaining classroom equipment and supplies

Learn more about the role of the paraprofessional by reading Section 2, “What Is a Paraprofessional?,” in the guide Effectively Utilizing and Supporting Paraprofessionals. At the link below. (Look for the link to the resource titled “Paraprofessional Manual—Ionia County.”) www.gvsu.edu/autismcenter/start-resources-55.htm

Week One Action Plan

• Arrive on time and ready to work.
• Learn the names of your students.
• Introduce yourself to key staff members and other paraprofessionals.
• Get copies of:
  • school personnel directory (or locate its online edition)
  • school organizational chart
  • school policies and procedures handbook
  • school calendar
• Become familiar with the layout of the school by taking a tour and/or using a school map. Locate:
  • buildings
  • offices
  • classrooms and labs
  • library
  • restrooms
  • entrances and exits
  • cafeteria
  • recess areas
  • bus drop-off area
  • staff parking areas

• Identify examples of assistive devices.

• Preview the website in advance. Find an alternate resource if the link has changed.

• Ask for suggestions to add to this list.
• Discuss the value of keeping a daily journal. Ask if anyone keeps a journal, and what it means to them.

Strategies for Career Success

• Ask questions when you are unsure about what to do or how to do it.
• Keep a personal journal to keep track of questions you want to answer, training you want to pursue, and reflections on your performance.
• Take responsibility for building your skills. This includes:
  • Taking advantage of professional development opportunities offered by the school district.
  • Staying up-to-date about district policies and procedures through newsletters and other sources.
  • Learning more about special education issues from respected sources, including organization websites and professional publications.
  • Asking for feedback about your performance in addition to the formal performance evaluation process.
• Strive to make a good first impression with everyone you meet.
• What are ways that the paraprofessional can set an example every day? For example, “keep in motion” would be one way.
• Supplement these directions with additional guidelines as appropriate.

Activity 2.2
Interview a Paraprofessional

Directions: Interview a working paraprofessional. Get responses to the questions below, as well as any that you create. Be sure to have the permission of the paraprofessional and the supervising teacher in advance.

1. What is most rewarding about your job?

• Ask for volunteers to share their ideal job descriptions. How are they similar and different?
Ethics

As members of a team which serves the unique needs of individual students, paraprofessionals also have a responsibility to behave ethically in regard to those students. Ethical considerations for paraprofessionals affect daily responsibilities, interactions with students and parents/guardians, the paraprofessional as a representative of the school, and the working relationship of the paraprofessional with the supervising teacher. Paraprofessionals must develop their personal understanding about possible situations and the appropriate and ethical responses. Teachers and administrators can assist paraprofessionals in recognizing these responses as well. Another tool for building a framework for ethical behavior is a school or school district code of ethics for employees. Such codes of ethics may address the paraprofessional’s relationship with teachers, with students and their parents or guardians, and with the school itself.

A key component of ethical behavior for paraprofessionals is maintaining confidentiality about students and related information. A federal law that applies to paraprofessionals is FERPA, or the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act. FERPA protects the privacy of student education records. The law applies to all schools that receive funds under an applicable program of the U.S. Department of Education. FERPA gives parents certain rights with respect to their children’s education records. These rights transfer to the student when he or she reaches the age of 18 or attends a school beyond the high school level. (Students to whom the rights have transferred are “eligible students.”) Generally, schools must have written permission from the parent or eligible student in order to release any information from a student’s education record. However, FERPA allows schools to disclose those records, without consent, to specific parties or under specific conditions. (See the module, “Legal Foundations of Special Education.”) Paraprofessionals must be cautious when it comes to all information about students. They must apply FERPA requirements in response to any request for such information.

• Reference the discussion of FERPA from Module 1.

• Provide potential scenarios to which FERPA requirements would apply.
Activity 2.4
Ethical Issues for Paraprofessionals

Directions: Paraprofessionals may find themselves in situations that challenge their ethical judgment. At the website below, read each situation carefully. Then, identify the ethical issue involved and the appropriate response of the paraprofessional. Discuss your responses in a team or group setting to compare responses. You can also compare your responses to those on the website.

Activity 2.5
Field Experience Activities

Directions: Write a 250-word summary for each activity below.

1. Observe a severe/profound special education classroom. Describe how the paraprofessional supports the behavior, academic, and other related needs in the classroom.

2. Observe a mild/moderate special education classroom or inclusion program. Describe how the paraprofessional supports students, the special education teacher, and/or the general education teacher.

3. Interview a special education teacher, general education teacher, and related services professional regarding their roles and responsibilities related to their job description working with students with disabilities and paraprofessionals.

4. Interview a paraprofessional regarding their roles and responsibilities related to their job description in their current assignment.

• Preview the activity in advance.

• Ask for volunteers to share their experiences.
• Ask for volunteers to share their reflections.

• Discuss the context of each task — when, where, and how often might a paraprofessional perform each task?

Activity 2.6
Observe, Discuss and Reflect Upon Specific Tasks of Paraprofessionals

Directions: Observe each of the following tasks as it is performed. Discuss each task with a supervising teacher, then reflect upon each task. Complete each rubric below.
