COURSE HELD AT OFFSITE LOCATION

This dynamic, single-officer course is designed to equip law enforcement professionals—whether off-duty, in plain clothes, or in uniform—with the knowledge, skills, and mindset necessary to effectively respond to an armed threat, including active shooter situations.

Participants will explore the decision-making process behind off-duty and plain clothes carry, levels of intervention, and the legal framework surrounding deadly force through policy review and real-world case studies. The course also addresses practical considerations such as ergonomic carry options and strategies to reduce the risk of blue-on-blue encounters.

Through a combination of lecture and applied concepts, officers will develop a foundational understanding of solo officer movement, threshold evaluation, and room entry techniques. Additional focus is placed on post-engagement priorities and incident management to ensure a comprehensive approach to critical incident response.

This course is designed for officers seeking practical, real-world strategies to confidently and effectively respond when they may be the only one on scene.
