Children Hear Better with FM Systems

Do you work with a child who has hearing aids or a cochlear implant? If so, it is important to know about FM Systems.

What is a FM?

- Terms Defined:
 - FM - Frequency Modulated System
 - Traditional FM - Raises level of speech signal equally across the board
 - Dynamic FM - Always analyzing what is happening in the room
- Wireless system designed to improve speech understanding in noisy situations and at distances of up to 50 feet.
- Improves Signal-to-Noise Ratio (SNR) by 10dB reducing effects of distance, noise, and reverberation.
- Can be used with hearing aids or without hearing aids in the case of normal hearing (CAPD/ADHD/Dyslexia/Autism).
- Can be used in personal situations (home, riding in car, church etc) and/or the classroom.
- Direct Audio Input (DAI) for multimedia devices (TV, computers, MP3's, video games, etc.).
- Binaural FM is used when the loss is bilateral
- Audiologists are uniquely qualified to select, evaluate, fit and dispense FM systems (ASHA, 2002).

Tip of the Month:

Some Monitoring Tools

- Ling 6 Sounds
- Listening Inventory for Education (LIFE)
- Early Listening Function (ELF)
- Screening Instrument for Targeting Educational Risk (SIFTER, Preschool SIFTER, Secondary SIFTER)

FM System Components:

- Transmitter/microphone is worn by the parent or teacher
- Microphones available are lapel/boom/"passaround."
- Receivers available are universal, integrated, audioshoes, neckloops, receivers for normal hearing users, Cochlear Implant users, and BAHA users.
- Soundfield FM systems are available for the classroom.

Daily Listening checks for FM systems:

- Visual inspection of device and its components
- Listening to sound quality, interference, static, and intermittency
- Have listening stethoscopes, monitoring earphones for CI's, battery testers

Make sure to notify an audiologist if malfunction(s) are noted.
