RESEARCH

Ashley Harvey, PhD Student
Oklahoma State University
2022-23 OCCY CIP Fellow

Children of Incarcerated Parents Doctoral Fellows Program

OCCY supports transformative student research and training in Oklahoma. Fellows are actively engaged in a doctoral level scholarship which holds the potential to improve the quality of life for children and families impacted by incarceration and the carceral system in Oklahoma. They are provided with an annual stipend of $2,500 to support their research studies.

Ashley Harvey, PhD student at Oklahoma State University serves as the 2022-2023 OCCY CIP Fellow. Her dissertation topic examines the strength and interaction of multiple causal variables of maladjustment for children of incarcerated parents. Past research has examined the relationship between parental incarceration and negative child outcomes, but questions regarding how much of the impact is specific to parental incarceration and how much can be accounted for other things such as poverty, neighborhood violence, exposure to substance abuse or mental health issues, etc. Her research will examine the strength and interaction of these variables using structural equation modeling, an advanced statistical technique used to examine causal relationships, not just correlation.

EDUCATIONAL TOOLKIT

Children of Incarcerated Parents Educational Toolkit

The Children of Incarcerated Parents Toolkit provides caregivers, service providers, educators and others access to information about state and local resources to support children and families. The toolkit includes information related to family support programs, tips for caregivers and educators, answers to questions a child or a student may have about their parent’s arrest or incarceration, adverse childhood experiences, positive youth development and other related topics. The toolkit was written, edited, and designed by the Children of Incarcerated Parents Advisory Committee and OCCY staff, with the help of stakeholders, ranging from caregivers, parents, faith-based community members, counselors, educators, social workers, community leaders, child specialists and others.
